(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
FACES, VA., October 28.—A very pretty home marriage was solemnized yesterday morning at nine o'clock, the contracting parties being Miss Lucie Coleman, the attractive and much accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Coleman, of this place, and Mr. William Nathaniel Terry, of Pittsylvania county, Va.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Campbell Mayers, of South Boston, Va., pastor of the bride, in the presence of a small gathering of friends and relatives. The parlor was prettily decorated with autumn leaves, evergreens and hollyhocks. Next came the maid of honor, Miss Betty Coleman, sister of the bride, followed by the bride, Miss Coleman, who was escorted by Mr. Ben Terry, who came the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away. The wedding march from Lohengrin was rendered by Mrs. Bessie Meade, of Danville, Va.

After the ceremony a delightful wedding breakfast was served to the guests in the dining room, after which the bride donned a traveling suit of handsome grey cloth with hat and gloves to match, when they took the carriage in waiting amid a shower of rice and the hearty congratulations of all, for the train for Richmond, Va., and other points North.

The presents were numerous and handsome, which attested the popularity of the young couple among their friends.

Smith—Ryland.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
WALKER, VA., October 28.—Mr. Francis Smith, a young attorney of King and Queen, and Miss Annie Rylands, daughter of Mr. John N. Rylands, were married in the morning at the Baptist Church in the morning. The church was decorated in a pretty and novel manner. Mr. Hall presided at the organ, and Mr. Hall, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

Messrs. Mosby Ryland and Merriweather Smith, Albert Graham and Alfred Gwathmey, Charles Sale and James Lewis, Dr. William Gwathmey and John Garnett, acted as ushers.

The bride entered the church with her sister, Mrs. Christopher Garnett, of Richmond, acting as matron of honor. The bride was attended by a group of bridesmaids and carried white caryanthemums. They were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Arthur Smith, who was best man.

The bride was King and Queen's loveliest young ladies, and never looked prettier than on this, the supreme moment of her life.

After wedding reception at the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for Washington and other points of interest.

Sampson—Bentley.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
DUBLIN, VA., October 28.—Miss Margaret Elizabeth Bentley, of this place, became the bride of Mr. Sampson, of Middleboro, Ky., last evening. The Presbyterian Church, where the ceremony was performed, was beautifully decorated, and the brilliantly lighted altar, where a hundred candles lent their soft glow to the bright light of the chandeliers, was in most marked contrast with the gloom and rain and mid-outside.

The altar was a mass of green and white, and formed of evergreen and chrysanthemums backed by bougainvillea. Towering above this was a pointed arch crowned with a cross and connected with this central arch and flanking it on either side were three round arches, the whole formed of only evergreens and chrysanthemums.

Poems You Ought to Know.

Whatever your occupation may be, and however crowded your hours with affairs, do not fail to secure at least a few minutes every day for refreshment of your inner life with a bit of poetry.—Professor Charles Elliot Norton.

No. 640.

TO MY LOVE.

By WILLIAM BROWNE.

William Browne was born in Tavistock of Devonshire, Eng., in 1606. He was a student of Exeter College, Oxford, and afterward studied law at Inner Temple. In 1638 and 1639 he published "Britannia's Pastorals." In 1641 he published "The Shepherd's Pipe." In 1641 he became a tutor at Exeter College, where he was created Master of Arts. But little is known of his history, and there is much doubt about the date of his death—1666. He was an ingenious poet, and his work exhibited true inspiration. It is a vast storehouse of rural imagery and description. Had he yielded less to the bad taste of his age he would have been entitled to a much higher rank in the class of genuine poets.

S HALL I tell you whom I love?
Hearken, then, awhile to me!
And if such a woman move
As I now shall verify:
Be assured 'tis she, or none,
That I love, and love alone.

Nature did her so much right
As she scorns the help of art,
In as many virtues dight
As e'er yet embraced a heart;
So much good, so truly tried,
Some for less were defiled.

Wit she hath, without desire
To make known how much she hath;
And her anger flames no higher
Than may fitly sweeten wrath—
Full of pity as may be,
Though perhaps not so to me.

Reason masters every sense,
And her virtues grace her birth;
Lovely as all excellence,
Modest in her most of mirth;
Likelihood enough to prove
Only worth could kindle love.

Such she is, and if you know
Such a one as I have sung,
Be she brown, or fair, or—so
That she be but somewhat young;
Be assured 'tis she, or none,
That I love and love alone.

This poem began in The Times-Dispatch Sunday, October 11, 1904. One is published each day.

ONLY LIVING SON OF SOLDIER OF REVOLUTION

CAPTAIN EDWARD BASSETT WAPLES.
of Onancock, Va.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
ONANCOCK, VA., October 28.—Captain Edward Bassett Waples, of Onancock, is nearly eighty-two years old, and yet
a constant reader of the daily newspapers. He saw in a recent issue an account of the death of Mr. James Carson of Lieutenant Samuel Waples, a soldier who fought gallantly under the command of General Washington in the great war for Independence.

Lieutenant Waples was a native of his county of Accomac, and enlisted in his
county of Accomac, and enlisted in his twenty-first year in the Ninth Virginia Regiment, and marched with his company to near Philadelphia to join the Continental army, under command of General Nathaniel Greene. His regiment fought in the battles of the Brandywine and at Germantown. At the latter place the Ninth Virginia was cut to pieces after fierce fighting, and many were taken prisoners by the British, among them
Lieutenant Waples.

The prisoners were carried to Philadelphia and placed in an upper room. Lieutenant Waples made his escape in a most daring and peculiar manner. He had served an apprenticeship in Philadelphia, and while there had become acquainted with a true sympathizer and advocate of freedom's cause, Mrs. Jones, on hearing of Lieutenant Waples' capture, went to see him. She carried him a suit of Quaker clothes and took his old battle-swords home to mend. The Lieutenant was the object of much sport from his comrades, owing to his new clothes.

One day, however, a Colonel Cropper,
a fellow-prisoner, grabbed a Quaker hat from another prisoner, gave it to Lieutenant Waples, and told him to go down and make his escape. The Lieutenant, taking the Colonel at his word, started down the stairs. A British officer, who was stationed at the foot of the steps, thinking the Lieutenant was a real Quaker, collared him and demanded to know his business there. The officer reprimanded the sentinel for letting the man pass up to the prisoners, and gave him a kick out, and told him never to be seen there again, which he was very ready to agree to.

Lieutenant Waples made his way to the Jones home, where he found a number of British officers quartered, and Mrs. Jones, for fear of detection, made a servant of the Lieutenant and put him to doing domestic duties around the supper table. The next morning Mrs.
Jones fixed up a market basket, put it on the arm of the brave soldier, and escorted him out of the city on a for-expedition. Soon finding himself clear of the danger of arrest by the soldiers, Lieutenant Waples quickly made his way to Washington's troops at Valley Forge.
Lieutenant Waples had a son in the war of 1812. He was a lifelong Democrat, and in his day one of the chief leaders
